Good Shepherd participation in Blue Heart Campaign

To demonstrate our support to the migrant workers, and to inform the public the migrant workers are one of the most vulnerable communities to human trafficking, we, the Good Shepherd Social Welfare (GSSWF) prepared a campaign stand right outside TRS and held up a large banner of UN's Anti Human Trafficking (Blue Heart) Campaign in Indonesian slogans.

GSSWF also arranged for two Indonesian-speaking interpreters to broadcast important information about the rights and services available to the migrant workers. Aiming to deepen migrant workers' understanding of labor rules and regulations, GSSWF workers held a 'question and answer' contest with prizes - Indonesian Instant Noodles. Almost a hundred migrant workers participated.

An Indonesian migrant worker who has lived in Taipei for decades, says Taiwanese nowadays are more open towards foreign workers who want to celebrate religious festivals. In previous times, foreign workers may attract unwanted attention if they attended such activities.
