

Campaign on Stop Violence Against Women and Children in Hong Kong

On November 26, in all the English classes at Marycove Schools, body language was used to promote the call to stop violence against women and children amongst its teachers and students.

- Guide young girls to report cases to social workers and teachers
- Encourage young girls to stand up for themselves when facing violence

In Good Shepherd Residence, because of the current disturbing situation in Hong Kong, most children have been in conflict with their parents and vice versa. Some parents even used violence towards their children. As a means to aid family harmony, the staff promoted and practiced non-violent communication with the programme participants.

In Good Shepherd hostel, the programme participants who did not go to the streets were invited to be part of the Good Shepherd activity to raise their awareness to stop violence against women and children.
